OVERVIEW

Bo knows how to leverage his in-depth knowledge of project management to foster the growth of the renewable energy industry.

From green fields to financings, Bo's renewables practice grew out of his history working around the energy sector. He spent time at both wind and solar companies and state and federal agencies, thus offering a breadth of knowledge advising energy clients front start to finish. This enables him to provide an array of real estate and development services on projects ranging from distributed generation to utility scale and from green hydrogen to floating solar.

Bo thrives on resolving the complex issues that come with the dramatic growth in the industry. For Bo, counseling on renewable energy development is both a well-honed skill set and a passion. He works with clients to efficiently and effectively complete projects, and foster much needed sustainability and economic growth in the industry.
