OVERVIEW

Caleb defends major companies in product liability and commercial lawsuits, taking a hands-on role in building their cases.

Caleb's litigation experience focuses on consumer products, industrial machinery, and commercial disputes. He routinely works with sophisticated, multinational corporations and is an integral part of client service teams for many Fortune 50 and Fortune 500 companies. Caleb's practice depends on methodical legal analysis and thorough fact investigation to build clients' cases from the ground up. His experience includes second chairing a bench trial with a verdict in the client's favor, as well as several significant dispositive motion wins.

Before joining the firm, Caleb served more than a decade in the U.S. Army as a mechanic and helicopter crewmember. His background provides a solid mechanical competency, and he readily grasps how complex machinery and products operate.

Caleb completed two combat deployments, where he was responsible for anticipating contingencies and maintaining high-stakes, high-dollar technical precision levels under pressured circumstances. The work required discipline, organization, a
