OVERVIEW

With a strong background in regulatory law, John assists healthcare clients in ensuring compliance during transactions and throughout day-to-day operations.

John has devoted his career to healthcare regulatory work and is highly knowledgeable regarding licensing matters, provider contracts, Medicare and Medicaid reimbursement and enrollment, Certificate of Need (CON) laws, and healthcare fraud and abuse, including violations of the False Claims Act (FCA), Anti-Kickback Statute (AKS), and Stark Law. He regularly advises healthcare organizations on regulatory compliance requirements in their contracts, marketing campaigns, and routine operations, and he has a particular focus on the regulatory questions that arise in the midst of corporate transactions in healthcare.

John has represented hospitals, rehab facilities, home health agencies, and physician practices during purchases and sales. He advises on licensure and certification requirements in these contexts, as well as on fraud and abuse concerns that may be uncovered during a transaction. He has walked clients through the CMS self-disclosure process and is familiar with the corporate structure questions and real estate issues inherent in many transactions.

John discovered his interest in healthcare during law school through his excitement for the fast paced, rapid regulatory changes brought by the healthcare industry. After earning his J.D., he joined the firm's Healthcare Regulatory & Compliance Counseling team.
