OVERVIEW

Julie believes that hard work and self-discipline are the keys to success, at work and in life.

As a college track and field athlete, Julie was never afraid of a challenge. She spent four years before law school balancing academics and one of track's most grueling races: the 400-meter dash. It was a combination that required maximizing her time and staying focused, and it's a lesson she still brings to her life every day.

Julie used that same self-discipline to work full time and put herself through law school at night. Now, she brings her work ethic to the labor and employment group, where she helps clients navigate complex issues.
