OVERVIEW

Meredith has significant experience representing investors, lenders, community development entities, and other businesses in commercial financing transactions involving federal and state tax credits.

At Husch Blackwell, Meredith represents clients in New Markets Tax Credit (NMTC) transactions, which utilize various forms of debt, equity, and public financing. She advises parties on all sides of NMTC projects, from investors to Community Development Entities (CDEs) to source lenders. Meredith has previously contributed to transactions involving the construction of federally qualified health clinics, solar energy production facilities, and the expansion of community centers, to name a few.

Meredith also represents lenders in Low-Income Housing Tax Credit (LIHTC) and Property Assessment Clean Energy (PACE) financing transactions across the country, from the District of Columbia to Hawaii, with significant experience in drafting and negotiating bridge loans to support LIHTC projects.

Meredith is enthusiastic about the positive impact tax incentive programs have in the neighborhoods around them. She values the opportunity to play a role in encouraging development in underserved regions.
