OVERVIEW

Addy focuses her practice on appellate advocacy and complex commercial litigation matters.

Addy takes pride in zealously advocating for others. She recognizes the intricate and complex nature of the law, yet she is adept at strategically addressing these issues to obtain the best possible outcomes for clients.

Addy leverages her written advocacy skills to represent clients in a variety of legal matters. Her experience includes handling cases involving fiduciary litigation, various business litigation disputes, and state court appeals.

Addy previously worked alongside the Innocence Project of Texas through the Innocence Clinic at Texas Tech University School of Law. There, she assisted wrongfully convicted individuals with their post-conviction litigation matters at both the state and federal levels, gaining significant proficiency in drafting motions, briefs, proposed findings of fact, and conclusions of law, among other things. However, most critically, this experience honed her ability to provide emotional support and guidance to clients during high-stakes situations. Her law school years also included two summers at Husch Blackwell and an internship with a Texas health system.

Known for her strong work ethic, reliability, and detail-oriented approach, Addy generates creative, practical solutions for clients.
