OVERVIEW

John represents clients in complex commercial litigation.

A litigator, John focuses his practice on a wide variety of general business disputes, including personal injury defense for corporate clients, state medical board licensing cases, breach of contract, construction defect, landlord-tenant disputes, and litigation arising from real estate transactions. He has assisted with cases from initial demand all the way through resolution, and he has experience with settlement negotiations, mediation, and trial preparation.

After beginning his legal career in real estate for renewable energy projects, John quickly found himself drawn to litigation. With a lifelong love of writing, he was enthusiastic about the opportunity to use the written word to advocate for clients, and he soon transitioned to a litigation practice, joining the firm's Commercial Litigation team. In addition to persuasive writing, John also loves strategizing for the best argument and the best path to achieve success for the client.

Known as a good listener with an eye for detail, John leaves no stone unturned when he works a case. He is quick to absorb information and trustworthy in the courtroom or in settlement negotiations. Clients can have confidence that they will always be at the center of John's attention, and that he will work tirelessly to achieve the best results possible.
