OVERVIEW

James defends clients in mass tort and product liability matters.

James chose to pursue a career as an attorney after working as a legal assistant and paralegal in mass torts and multi-district litigation. His experience in fast-paced environments, handling ESI and discovery, and participating in deposition and trial teams fueled his desire to attend law school himself.

As a law student, James gained valuable experience as a student attorney in the Veterans Legal Clinic. Working with veterans and obtaining favorable outcomes on their behalf deepened his appreciation for the practical aspects of law and the importance of effective client counseling. His pre-law work experience as a visiting English teacher in France also emphasized the importance of effective communication, a skill he applies daily in his legal practice.

James chose to focus his practice on Mass Tort and Product Liability out of a passion for working with expert witnesses, developing case strategies, and seeing cases through to the end.

As a summer associate at Husch Blackwell, he gained experience drafting a fact witness deposition outline, participating in an accident site investigation, and contributing to various litigation and real estate matters.

Clients can expect James to be diligent, attentive to their business needs, and adept at solving complex legal problems. Known for his strong communication skills and thorough approach, James is committed to helping clients achieve their goals while navigating intricate legal landscapes.
