OVERVIEW

Marlaina focuses on intellectual property and data privacy work.

With a prior career working with online data assets for a marketing technology and consulting company, Marlaina was drawn to the fast-paced changes in data privacy and AI regulations. During law school, she served as editor-in-chief of the Colorado Technology Law Journal, where she worked with articles on emerging tech law and policy issues. She also served as both a law clerk and summer associate at Husch Blackwell, gaining practical experience in drafting privacy policies and tracking state privacy and AI bills. Her work at the firm further honed her skills in creating compliance strategies that address various privacy laws across different jurisdictions.

Marlaina's previous career gives her firsthand insight into the complexities of implementing technical solutions that comply with data privacy regulations. She understands what clients are faced with—and the importance of offering practical legal counsel that fits the needs of their business.

Marlaina is known for her dedication and thoughtful approach to each client's unique challenges. She brings a thorough and engaged perspective to compliance strategies, making her a valuable asset to the team.
