OVERVIEW

Angela fights for clients in complex commercial litigation.

A trial attorney, Angela serves clients in a wide variety of business disputes across multiple industries. She works particularly often with nonprofit organizations. She also handles product liability lawsuits and is highly experienced with patents and other intellectual property litigation. Angela has represented both foreign and domestic clients and has assisted companies based in Asia in protecting their ability to sell to the U.S. market.

After growing up with a dad who served as a judge in California, Angela had always known that she wanted to be in the courtroom herself. Her role on her law school's national mock trial team confirmed her desire, and she gained an unusual amount of experience in hearings early in her career at a small law firm. Angela is known as a strong public speaker who's confident and comfortable in court and who readily commands the attention of judges and juries.

Alongside her reputation for confidence and oral argument, Angela is also known for her skill in communicating litigation strategies and for her responsiveness. She offers clients a realistic, conservative view of how matters are likely to play out in trial. A strong advocate with a solid courtroom presence, Angela ensures that clients know their cases are in the right hands to achieve the best outcome possible.
