Husch Blackwell's Nemes and Chicoine Included in World Trademark Review's 2022 WTR 1000

Husch Blackwell's Alan Nemes, partner, and Caroline Chicoine, of counsel, have been ranked in World Trademark Review's WTR 1000 in Missouri for the second straight year.

“An unstinting dedication to client care is the calling card of Husch Blackwell, which adopts a bespoke approach to all IP instructions. Its commercially minded counsel comes informed by a refined understanding of the ambitions and challenges of each individual patron and the shifting dynamics of the industries in which they operate,” WTR noted in its editorial for the 2022 version of the WTR 1000 Missouri rankings.

“Partner Alan Nemes embodies this versatility, drawing on previous in-house experience to assist brand heavyweights in the food and beverage, fashion and consumer products sectors,” WTR continued. “The team is also home to trademark maestro Caroline Chicoine, whose background in electrical engineering translates into practical advice and insight on the issues that clients face.” Both attorneys are based in the firm's St. Louis office.

Now in its 12th edition, the WTR 1000 identifies the leading professionals and firms that are deemed outstanding at obtaining, protecting, managing, enforcing and monetizing trademarks. The WTR 1000 focuses exclusively on trademark practice and has firmly established itself as the definitive ‘go-to’ resource for those seeking world-class legal trademark expertise.
